ON THE JOB

The board of directors for Food Alliance, a Portland-based nonprofit that promotes sustainable agriculture, recently named Scott Exo as new executive director. Exo has served as the organization's director of Northwest programs since 1999. He replaces Deborah Kane, who served as executive director since Food Alliance's incorporation in 1997. Kane will remain involved in Food Alliance's market development and consulting work. Before joining Food Alliance, Exo served as director of the Grassroots Leadership Project at 1000 Friends of Oregon. In addition to his work in Oregon, Scott has managed rural development and study abroad programs in Asia and Africa and was a consultant to a range of community organizations and non-profits.
