

Jun. 23, 2009 at 12:15pm

People on the move

Promotions, awards and recognitions in the South Sound

Wilcox Farms Inc., the century-old Northwest egg producer, has received the esteemed Food Alliance certification for its cage-free and organic egg production. Food Alliance, a national non-profit organization, offers the most comprehensive certification program for sustainably produced food in North America. Farms and processing facilities receiving the certification are audited regularly by an independent, third party inspector and judged on safe and fair working conditions, humane treatment of animals and protection of the environment. Wilcox Farms, celebrating their centennial year, said they understand their role in being good stewards of the land, environment and as an employer. This certification reinforces the company's vision.